		To apply for the KFC senior discount seniors will need to meet eligibility criteria and need documentation: Eligibility Criteria To be considered a senior and use the discounts at KFC, a senior usually needs to be 55 years or older. However, this specific age limit is not used in all locations. In some regions or specific franchises, the age criteria might be set a little bit higher or lower. Given these factors, it is a wise move for a senior to inquire at his/her local KFC outlet before placing an order to make sure he/she meets his/her specific senior age requirement. Documentation

		Proof of age is important when it involves availing of senior discounts. A valid ID like a driver's license or just ID for those who do not drive or a passport is the standardized form of documentation accepted by most KFC outlets. Some branches in particular areas with distinct senior citizen policies might also request a dedicated senior citizen card or even membership documentation. In these cases, having these on hand when the senior visits ensure a smooth transaction and the full enjoyment of senior privilege.
